and Abalom Jones and Richard Allen undertook the former department, that of furnishing nurses and William Gray, the latter the interment of the dead. The great demand for nurses afforded an opportunity for imposition, which was eagerly seized by some of the vilest of the blacks... But it is wrong to cast a censure on the whole for this sort of conduct, as many people have done. The services of Jones, Allen and Gray, and others of their colour have been very great and demand public gratitude.
